

Self Leadership Track

“Our development is our choice. Those accumulated choices prepare us to take advantage of unexpected opportunities or weaken our abilities and set us up to be victims of change. Our leadership development choices raise us up or drag us down.” – Jim Clemmer

If you want to be a better leader to others, start with leading yourself well. Growing our leadership is also a dynamic process. It begins at the center of our being and develops in multiple directions. This is a suggested training and development track to increase your personal leadership.

Foundations of Leadership	Classroom workshop offered by Office of Diversity, Equality & Training that helps you focus on your personal leadership purpose, vision, and values.
Personal Accountability	Classroom workshop offered by Office of Diversity, Equality & Training that helps you take responsibilities for you choices.
Now, Discover Your Strengths	Book by Marcus Buckingham & Donald Clifton that helps you discover what you’re great at so that you can build passion and commitment by working from your strengths.
Building Trust	Classroom workshop offered by Office of Diversity, Equality & Training that helps you lay the foundation of all relationships with trust and respect.
Career Development	Worksheets on the Office of Diversity, Equality & Training web site that help you map out your professional growth and development. https://personnel.ky.gov/Pages/selfdevelop.aspx
Working Through Change	Classroom workshop offered by Office of Diversity, Equality & Training that helps you mobilize yourself through the curves of life that change events create.
Developing Character	Classroom workshop offered by Office of Diversity, Equality & Training that helps you strengthen six pillars of character and steps for ethical decision-making.